

A SQUARE DEAL

Is assured you when you buy one of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formula are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native, medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. While potent to cure they are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children.

Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better agent is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles used in them, viz.—pure triple-refined glycerine of proper strength. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable anti-septic and anti-ferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, "heartburn," foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal Passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures even in the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on-coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate hang-on, or chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

If the sweet taste of the "Discovery," caused by the glycerine, is disliked, a few drops of lemon juice, orange or lime juice, added to each dose will make it agreeable and pleasant and will not in the slightest interfere with its beneficial effects.

It's an insult to your intelligence for a dealer to endeavor to palm off upon you some nostrum of unknown composition in place of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines which are of known composition. Most dealers recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines because they know what they are made of and that the ingredients employed are among the most valuable that a medicine for like purposes can be made of. The same is true of leading physicians who do not hesitate to recommend them, since they know exactly what they contain and that their ingredients are the very best known to medical science for the cure of the several diseases for which these medicines are recommended.

With tricky dealers it is different.

Something else that pays them a little greater profit will be urged upon you as "just as good," or even better. You can hardly afford to accept a substitute of unknown composition and without any particular record of cures in place of Dr. Pierce's medicines which are of known composition and have a record of forty years of cures behind them. You know what you want and it is the dealer's business to supply that want. Insist upon it.

Some Costs of Running a Hotel.

It is stated, on excellent authority, that the manager of the Waldorf-Astoria must receive in cash over $10,000 daily before he can look for a cent profit.

During the first year of the existence of the St. Regis, John Jacob Astor's Fifth Avenue hotel, no less than $30,000 were spent for cut flowers alone. Even this huge sum is outdone by the florist bill of the Hotel Astor, which, by reason of its countless banquettes, exceeds about $60,000 annually for these fragrant but fragile decorations.

At the St. Regis some of the expenditures for everyday articles of food tax the imagination and strain credulity. For instance, the butter cost $77,000 a year—more than the salary of the President of the United States; the egg bill is $12,000; vegetables, $80,000; fruit, $42,000; poultry, $113,000; and meats, $200,000. It should be borne in mind that the St. Regis is not the largest of modern hotels in New York, and hence its commissariat department is by no means the most notable from a financial standpoint.

George W. Boldt, manager of the Waldorf-Astoria, paid, in a single year, $150,000 to replace the broken china, crockery, etc., and it is stated that, on a friend commenting on the magnitude of this sum, he replied that he did not think that his employees were so very, very careless, after all—Remsen Crawford, in "Success."

REDRESS AT BALLOT BOX

May Be the Papal Hope in France

APPEAL BY CARD. RICHARD

The Archbishop of Paris Protests "in the name of the Church and of the Elementary Principles of Justice."

Rome, Jan. 7.—Developments in the church and state situation in France continue to indicate that the Vatican authorities feel constrained to vindicate their course, by which church property in France to the value of $120,000,000 was forfeited, by the rejection of everything offered by the government, and will even order the clergy to leave the churches in the hope of driving the French Catholics to demand redress at the ballot box. Bishop Lacroix of Tarentaise, situated in a poor, mountainous region of France, has received orders from the Vatican necessitating the dissolution of an association which he had formed with the object of retaining the church property in order to support the stricken clergy of his diocese. Many bishops have begun to issue appeals to the faithful for funds, pointing the spoliation of the church in the blackest colors.

Cardinal Richard's appeal, which will be read in the churches of Paris today, will say in part: "The spoliation of the church in France will soon be complete. The government has repudiated its sacred obligation by suppressing the public worship budget. The small recompense which is accorded will not pay for what is owing to the clergy for the property seized during the revolution. The bishops and priests have been driven from their homes and the government has stripped the church of all the property received owing to the liberality of the faithful during the past century. The property of the warden, pious endowments, seminaries, rectories and even the fund of the aged and infirm clergy is today sequestered and tomorrow will be consigned to the auctioneer. Against this action in the name of the church and of the elementary principles of justice."

FORTY WORKMEN BURIED.

Accident in the Grand Duchy of Hesse—Fifteen Bodies Recovered.

Berlin, Jan. 7.—Forty workmen were buried Friday evening in the cutting of a new railway line between Lamscheid and Leinungen, says a dispatch from Hesse. The bodies of 15 of the workmen were recovered. The bodies of 13 of the men and 15 injured workmen have been recovered. Most of them were young men. Among the injured are three children. It is considered probable that there are still 13 bodies beneath the fallen earth.

Fish Out of Water.

It is well known, says Knowledge, that certain kinds of fishes are able to live out of water much longer than others, the power being dependent upon the length of time that their gills are capable of remaining damp. So long as this condition lasts fish are able to obtain the necessary amount of oxygen from the air through the medium of the water spread over the fine membrane of the gills. Recently a German has invented an apparatus by means of which the gills can be kept moist for an indefinite period. This apparatus consists of a wooden box with a number of compartments corresponding with the size of the fishes. On the floor of each compartment is a layer half an inch deep of cloths saturated with water which by evaporation keeps the atmosphere moist. The gills of the fishes are thus kept damp, while oxygen is supplied from a receptacle outside the box. Many kinds of fresh water fish have, it is said, been kept alive for from three to four days by means of this ingenious invention.

The Bag on the Doorknob.

A late home comer, walking through the uptown residential section after midnight, says the Philadelphia Record, would be surprised to see what appears to be white crape hanging from hundreds of doors and bell knobs. The white thing is not an indication of a child's death, however, but merely a bread bag that the baker supplies to his customers. For years householders had to put up with uncertainty about their bread, not knowing whether some of the numerous carts that make the night less silent had investigated and pawed over their morning loaf. But now the bakers, in order that their customers might feel more secure, have provided these white bags, which the housekeeper hangs on the doorknob at night and the baker fills early in the morning.

France in China.

More than eight years have elapsed since China granted to France a concession to build a railway from the Tongkin frontier to Yunnanfu, the capital of the southwestern province, a distance of about 250 miles. Labor and climatic difficulties as well as a change in 1904 of the original trace of the line have had much to do with the delay, but work is now proceeding all along the new route, and it is expected that the railway will be open as far as Mengtun in 1907 and be completed to Yunnanfu, the terminus, in 1908.—London Engineer.

How England Lost Argentina.

"Had it not been for General Whitlock's disgraceful management of the English army in 1896 Argentina, in which $500,000,000 of British capital is invested, would have been a portion of the British empire," said Major General Sir A. B. Trollope at a meeting of the Royal United Service Institution held the other day in London.

OPEN FOR PATIENTS EARLY NEXT FALL

Vermont Tuberculosis Sanatorium Which Was Donated by United States Senator Proctor.

Rutland, Jan. 7.—The Vermont sanatorium—the first institution of its kind in the state—made possible by the generosity of Hon. Redfield Proctor, senior United States senator of Vermont, will be ready to receive patients next fall.

For years the people of the Green Mountain state have felt the necessity of a state sanatorium for the special treatment of tuberculosis. The subject has been discussed in all its phases and for some time there had been talk on the part of many that the state take the matter in hand and establish such an institution.

It was at this stage of the proceeding that Senator Proctor came forward and contributed $50,000 for the erection of suitable buildings and an additional $100,000, the revenue from which, it is expected, will defray the running expenses of the sanatorium.

Senator Proctor's gift was made something like a year ago. The first move was to select a board of trustees of capable men who would be willing to devote a portion of their time at least to seeing that the senator's desires were carried out. The selection of trustees was made with regard to the fitness of the men and the board as now constituted is considered an able and efficient one.

At the first meeting of the trustees officers were chosen. The selections made were Hon. F. C. Partridge of Proctor, president; Hon. F. O. Butterfield of Derby Line, vice president; Benjamin Williams, Jr., of Proctor, treasurer; Dr. W. N. Bryant of Ludlow, secretary; Dr. C. S. Caverly of Rutland, D. D. Burdett of Pittsford, Hon. Olin Merrill of Enosburg Falls, Redfield Proctor, Jr., of Proctor, and the president ex-officio, executive committee; ex-Gov. C. S. Page of Hyde Park, Hon. George Aikin of Woodstock, and Rev. J. R. Barrett of Burlington, financial committee; Frank H. Brooks, St. Albans, and E. R. Baldwin of Saranac Lake, for years associated with Dr. Trudeau, the famous tuberculosis expert of the Adirondacks, was consulted, and he paid a visit to Vermont. He inspected the sites considered favorable in Mendon, Ludlow, and Pittsford. His selection will be made before the summer. His judgment a statement was prepared regarding location, soil, elevation and nearness to railroad facilities of the three sites inspected by Dr. Baldwin, which was submitted to six well known specialists.

Without exception, these specialists all favored Pittsford and with these opinions to influence the trustees the Pittsford site was chosen. Pittsford is a village of less than 2,000 inhabitants. It is located in Rutland county, eight miles from the marble city. The site for the sanatorium is about one and one-half miles drive from the village of Pittsford, which is rather round about on account of the hills. The distance from the sanatorium site to the postoffice in the center of the village, air line, is not over one-half mile. The site is 600 feet above the sea level. There will be three buildings, the main building being 100 by 100 feet. The side or wing buildings will be 70 by 30 feet. They will be of colonial architecture, built of wood, with red brick veneer and white marble trimmings. The main or center building will be two and one-half stories.

FREAKS OF FASHION.

Handsome Ostrich Feathers Tein Modish Hats—Bronze Slippers.

There is no smarter trimming on a hat than a handsome ostrich feather. It is equally at home on a picture hat and a small toque. Some women grumble because their ostrich feathers so soon get out of curl, but if shaken a few minutes before a fire they curl again as well as on the day they were bought. The season's ostrich feathers are not much curled.

Bronze slippers and silk stockings are quite the latest bit of smartness.

LINGERIE SUGGESTION—5498-4863.

For indoor wear, either with afternoon or evening gowns, and because the slippers are to be worn so much of the time they are being made with lower heels. The toes are covered with intricate lines and swirls in bronze beads, and a little headed satin bow trims them.

The fashionable gown renders carefully fitted underwear a necessity, and well dressed women are as particular about the cut and style of their undergarments as they are about their gowns. Illustrated are garments each admirable in their way. The petticoat is of taffeta made with a fine bouffe cover is especially designed for the use of flouncing or hand embroidered strips of batiste.

DAIRYMEN GATHER

Annual Meetings of State Association

IN BURLINGTON TOMORROW

Sugar Makers Will Meet This Evening — A Large Number of Exhibits Entered at Both the Conventions.

Burlington, Jan. 7.—The city is full of dairymen and sugarmakers today to attend the annual meeting of the two most important and largest organizations in Vermont affecting the farmers of the state outside of the grange. Armory hall where the meetings will be held is attractively trimmed and the lower hall is already fast filling with machinery and canning utensils which will be on exhibition during the week. Fully 150 exhibits of butter have already reached Burlington and the show of butter and cheese at this gathering will far exceed all others of previous years. The first session of the 14th annual meeting of the Vermont Sugarmakers association will be held this evening with an address by president A. J. Croft and a report of V. L. Spear of Randolph on the Maple Sugar Makers association.

Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 will be held the first meeting of the 37th annual meeting of the Dairymen's association with a strong programme. The Women's Auxiliary will meet Tuesday evening which organization will also hold a special meeting Wednesday afternoon. The annual banquet of the dairymen and sugarmakers will be held at the Van Ness house Wednesday evening with E. A. Nutt of Montpelier as toastmaster. Sessions of the dairymen will close Thursday.

OFFICER'S MISTAKE.

St. Albans, Man Did Not Know of New Law.

Rutland, Jan. 7.—Chief of Police J. F. Mohoney of St. Albans brought a prisoner to this city Saturday for confinement at the house of correction and had to take him back again because the officer was ignorant of the new state law which makes it obligatory for persons convicted of intoxication and breach of the peace to serve their sentences in the counties where they were convicted.

The St. Albans man was to be committed for intoxication but Superintendent D. L. Morgan refused to accept him so after communicating with City Judge Post, Chief Mohoney started north with his man. Mr. Morgan predicted that there would be many mistakes of this kind as a result of the new law.

The Times' Daily Short Story.

The Colonel's Kid

(Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.)

Among the batch of forty recruits received at Fort Blank one day from Jefferson Barricks was one who attracted attention immediately from his superior looks and bearing. He had an aristocratic face, a good figure, and it was evident at a glance that he did not belong among that crowd. Private Harker had not been in the barracks an hour when it had been determined from colonel to corporal that he was a man who must be disciplined.

Colonel Banks had lost his wife two years before, but he had not sent his little daughter Edith east among relatives, as it had been supposed he would do. She was a handsome, sunny haired child of ten, and he clung to her and had an aunt come out and act as his housekeeper and a mother to the motherless. Scarcely any one at the fort gave the child her name when speaking of her. She was referred to affectionately as the colonel's kid.

The colonel's kid stood holding her father's hand when the recruits lined up for roll call. Her eyes roved along the line until they rested on Harker, and there they paused. There was that in his face that attracted her, and she secretly determined to be friends with him. He saw her from his place in the ranks, and his face softened. He dared not smile at her, but more friendliness came into his heart than had been there for many a day. The next day, and the next, and the next, he saw her from a distance while he was being drilled. On the fourth day, while he was doing sentry duty at the flag-staff, she came walking up to him and held out her hand and said:

"I like you. Won't you shake hands?" Private Harker's face was all smiles as he took her hand and assured her that he liked her in return and that back in the east he had a little niece who looked almost like her. Ten minutes later the colonel's kid was back in Officers' row with tears in her eyes, and Private Harker was in the guardhouse. It was a tremendous breach of discipline he had committed. Never before in the history of the American army, according to the sergeant, had a sentry on duty dared to pause in his monotonous tramp and ground arms and shake the colonel's daughter by the hand. The captain agreed with the sergeant, and Private Harker got five days' confinement. He knew that spite was the foundation, and he set his jaw hard. He had been at liberty only three days when fault was found with him at inspection of barracks. He answered back, and this time it was ten days in the guardhouse. At the end of that time he was called before the colonel.

In barracks even the children know what goes on. The colonel's kid had learned that Private Harker had been disgraced for shaking hands with her. She defended him. When he received his second sentence, she defended him more vigorously. In fact, she wept over it and was scolded by her father and aunt. Men and women make friendships in an hour, but their judgment is not as good as the intuition of a child. The kid had taken a liking to Private Harker, and they argued in vain. The colonel was upset over it. He was in angry mood when he received the recruit. There was nothing he could do officially, and yet he would not talk as man to man.

"Private Harker," he began, "I am sorry to hear bad reports of you. If you begin this way, where will you end? You may be above the common run, sir, but let me tell you that you can put on no airs here. If I catch you tripping again, I shall put you down as a trouble maker and act accordingly. Go to your quarters, sir."

The intent had been to humiliate him, and the soldier knew it. From that hour on he had but one object in view. It took him three months to accomplish it, but in the end he had talked revolt until the 200 rank and file at the post were ripe for it. They would leave the fort and scatter among the mines and ranches. Before leaving they would kill four or five of the officers that had been marked down. Never was a conspiracy better planned or a secret better kept. Not the slightest hint reached the officers' ears or the ears of those who would remain loyal. At 10 o'clock at night the 200 would arm, parade and march out in the face of the officers, and there would be shooting done before the last of them left the gate.

The signal was to be given by Private Harker—a musket shot. He had planned for days that the bull from that musket should find the colonel's heart. He would reach the colonel's quarters and fire on him through an open window. They had kept the kid out of his sight for weeks, and he did not notice her into account in his planning. It was her father he meant to kill, but her feelings were not considered. When the night came, he slipped out of barracks, dodged across the parade ground and skulked up a dark alley and reached the point aimed at. The evening was warm, and the colonel had fallen asleep as he sat over his papers. The soldier raised his musket and drew a fair bead for the officer's trigger, and his finger was pressing the trigger when a hand was gently laid on his arm. He lowered his musket to find the kid by his side and standing on her tiptoes to whisper: "Don't shoot him. He is my father. He don't like you, but for my sake don't shoot him."

Private Harker bent down and kissed the child and then walked away and out of the fort and was never seen again. The signal did not come, and the waiting conspirators cowered in their bunks and made no move. The colonel's kid had saved the day.

HOME NOTES.

Rub white spots on olecloth caused by heat from utensils with spirits of camphor.

If the kitchen walls are damp have them washed down with a strong solution of alum and water.

A good corn remedy consists of equal parts of sweet oil and iodine shaken together. Apply at night until relieved.

It is economical after using a bowl of cold starch to let it settle. Then pour off the water and dry the starch in the oven at night. It will be reduced to a cake and can be used again.

SCIENCE SIFTINGS.

Before Lister's antiseptic inventions the death rate in amputations of the thigh was 41 per cent. It is now about 6 per cent.

Some scientists believe that North America was in contact during prehistoric ages with Africa and with Europe, the former connection coming first.
